LUCOP's accelerated Doctor of Pharmacy (PharmD) program is fully accredited by the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE) and is an integrated-block, three-year curriculum. LU is a private not-for-profit 501(c)(3) university and consists of the College of Pharmacy, College of Biomedical Sciences, and School of Physician Assistant Studies. More information about LUCOP is available at: <https://www.larkin.edu/academics/college-of-pharmacy/>

LU maintains advanced and functional research capabilities in different areas of pharmaceutical sciences. Examples of available instrumentation include Agilent triple quadrupole liquid chromatography-mass spectrometry (LC-MS), automated flash chromatography system, SpectraMax multi-mode microplate reader platform, Zetasizer (dynamic light scattering), dissolution system, mixer, homogenizer, cell culture facility, real-time PCR, Western blotting, and FluorChem FC3 protein imager.

Major Responsibilities:

- Work closely with the Department Chair to ensure that the integrity of the University and the COP are in line with the founding principles, values, mission, and goals;
- Ensure the development, furtherance, and improvement of curriculum and educational assessment tools;
- Be available to teach assigned courses in pharmaceutical and biomedical sciences areas at an appointed time;
- Develop and deliver elective courses, as needed, in the specialty area of choice;
- Work with the Department Chair to formulate a strategy to develop and sustain the research program in LU laboratories;
- Seek research independence by submitting grants for extramural funding;
- Maintain a productive output of scholarly contributions, such as peer-reviewed publications in scientific journals;
- Disseminate knowledge by scholarly presentation at appropriate scientific and academic platforms;
- Assist in activities related to accreditation by various national, regional, state, and other accreditation and regulatory agencies;
- Serve on various committees of COP/University;
- Ensure mentoring of students;
- Represent the Department, College, and University to external institutions, organizations, and agencies;
- Ensure compliance with all LU policies and procedures;
- Promote safe working conditions and procedures in the Department;
- Promote collegiality, professional and ethical behaviors;
