programs at HCOP provide opportunities for faculty to teach in a student-centered learning environment, including unique early and advanced experiential programs.

The Department of Pharmacy Practice is committed to the success of all HCOP academic programs. Faculty members support the overall mission of the College by ensuring that HCOP Doctor of Pharmacy students graduate from the professional program as fully capable clinicians, prepared to deliver high-quality care and enhance the health and well-being of their patients. Teaching opportunities are available in Undergraduate, Doctor of Pharmacy, and Graduate and Residency programs. Faculty members in the Department of Pharmacy Practice provide outreach through the provision of patient care, as well as professional service. Additionally, the department is committed to conducting impactful research that advances the scientific community and pharmacy practice. The purpose of this position is to contribute across all mission areas while serving as a leader in advancing pharmacy practice.

The successful candidate is expected to:

- Contribute to education, interprofessional practice, and research efforts related to HCOP areas of distinction
- Actively participate in the teaching mission of the Harrison College of Pharmacy at the undergraduate, professional (PharmD), and graduate (Residency, MS, PhD) levels, as appropriate. This may include teaching in the didactic or experiential settings, to include active learning in the Integrated Practice Ready Curriculum, precepting students on Introductory and Advanced Pharmacy Practice Experiences, or leading interprofessional education learning opportunities.
- Mentor undergraduate, professional (PharmD) and graduate (Residency, MS, PhD) students, as appropriate
- Develop and maintain a model pharmacy practice consistent with pharmacy advancement goals and HCOP areas of distinction.
- Contribute to both clinical research and service in alignment with departmental Research and Outreach goals
- Develop and/or maintain an extramurally funded research program from public and/or private sources, as appropriate
- Develop a scholarly program and demonstrate a high level of scholarly activity as evidenced by quality publications in peer-reviewed scientific journals and through scientific presentations
- Demonstrate transformative leadership and advocacy in statewide efforts to implement pharmacy practice models that improve medication use and health outcomes
- Participate and provide leadership in professional and scientific organizations
- Emphasis on responsibilities is flexible and will be tailored to meet the individual professional
