presence and by conducting meaningful research that positively impacts patients and practice.

The Department of Pharmacy Practice is committed to the success of all HCOP academic programs. Faculty members support the overall mission of our College by ensuring that HCOP Doctor of Pharmacy students graduate from the professional program as fully capable clinicians, prepared to deliver high-quality care and enhance the health and well-being of their patients. Teaching opportunities are available in Undergraduate, Doctor of Pharmacy, Graduate, and Residency programs. Faculty members in the Department of Pharmacy Practice provide outreach through the provision of patient care, as well as professional service. Additionally, the department is committed to conducting impactful research that advances the scientific community and pharmacy practice. The purpose of this position is to contribute across all mission areas while serving as a leader in advancing community pharmacy practice.

The successful candidate is expected to:

- Develop and maintain a model community practice consistent with national community pharmacy advancement and transformation goals
- Serve in a leadership role in statewide efforts to implement community-based pharmacy practice models that improve medication use and health outcomes
- Contribute to interprofessional practice, education, and research efforts related to community pharmacy practice transformation
- Actively participate in the teaching mission of the Harrison College of Pharmacy at the undergraduate, professional (PharmD), and graduate (Residency, MS, PhD) levels, as needed
- Contribute to both clinical research and service in alignment with departmental Outreach and Research goals
- Mentor undergraduate, professional (PharmD) and graduate (Residency, MS, PhD) trainees, as needed
- Develop and/or maintain an extramurally funded research program from public and/or private sources, as appropriate
- Demonstrate a high level of scholarly activity as evidenced by quality publications in peer-reviewed scientific journals and active participation in professional societies
